FOREWORD

This supplement is one of a series on free and inexpensive instructional materials published by the CHICAGO SCHOOLS JOURNAL. Previous issues in the fields of natural science and mathematics have had very wide circulation and use, both in Chicago and throughout the United States. The JOURNAL staff plans to publish revised editions of material in this area at three year intervals.

The compiler of the present supplement is Dr. Frederick K. Branom, Chairman of the Department of Social Science in the Chicago Teachers College. He has checked the items for value and suitability for use with school pupils and for current availability. It is believed that commercial content, when present, is sufficiently unobtrusive.

The JOURNAL staff makes a suggestion regarding the use by teachers of compilations of this sort. The list is not "official" in the sense that a textbook formally adopted by a board of education is official. The teacher would do well to request a single copy of a suggested item to see if it meets his needs before ordering class size quantities.
